"JUST PLAIN REPUBLICANISM."

This is the Kind of Talk Vice-President Sherman Thinks the Country Ought to Have.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat:

"Just plain Republicanism," was Vice-President Sherman's answer when asked what particular points he would embasize in his speech in Guthrie. His audience showed, too, that this was the sort of talk, which it wanted. In its partisan sense the word Republicanism ought to be descriptive enough to tell what it means, without any explanations. In these days, however, the country is listening to talk in different directions from persons calling themselves Republicans which deserve some other name. But the kind which Guthrie heard from Vice President Sherman and ex-Representative James E. Watson of Indiana needed no qualifications or modifications to enable it to come under that classification. They told the benefits which the Payne Tariff is conferring upon the country, mentioned the aid which the postal savings bank is likely to bring to the smaller communities of the West and Southwest, and warned their hearers against the apathy or the folly which would permit the Democrats to carry the country in November.

Guthrie is a stalwart Republican center, just as every other community in Oklahoma is in which the Vice-President spoke. The same is true of the points at which he has appeared in Illinois and Missouri. Those three states take their Republicanism straight. While they are in the Insurgent belt, they are not hospitable to Insurgency. The Republican members of Congress from Missouri and Oklahoma were on the orthodox side in every division of the special and the regular sessions of the sixty-first Congress. The same is true of the Illinois Republican members, except in a few cases. No Republican need be ashamed of the position which the members of his party in Congress from Missouri and Oklahoma took on the leading issues of the period which has elapsed since the Sixty-first Congress assembled in extra session at the middle of March 1909. And a large majority of the Illinois members have also been on the right side on all the important questions. In no community in which the Vice-President has spoken while on his tour have the Republican masses been called upon to apologize for anything which their representatives in Congress have said or done.

It will be well for the Republicans of the rest of the country to understand that Insurgency has not so much of a hold on the West as is popularly supposed. That fad has captured Indiana, Kansas and Iowa, but it has not gone much further. It won only a fictitious victory in Nebraska, where the Republicans have re-nominated Senator Burkett, a stalwart.

Representative Tawney, the only stalwart in the Minnesota delegation, was marked for retirement by some of the pseudo-Republicans of his district, but there can be no reasonable doubt that he will get a re-nomination. He has been an alert, faithful and industrious member of the party, and Republicans all over the country hope that he will win at the primary In the coming Congress the Republican party will need all the loyal representatives whom it can get. Many important questions which will be presented in the short session in December of this year will have to be handed over to the long session of the new Congress. On this account there is an especial incentive for the nomination and election of men whose Republicanism will need no explanations or apologies. The canvass for such Republicans will be aided by the kind of speeches which Mr. Sherman has been making. The Republican Congressional Committee made no mistake when it sent the Vice-President on his speaking tour through this region At every point on the Republican line stalwarts should be placed on guard.

Pic-Nic Supper.

The members of the Union Friendly Society and a few invited guests enjoyed a most delightful pic-nic supper at Keystone Park last Thursday evening. Nineteen persons were present. An elaborate menu, prepared by the young ladies, was served, after which the evening was devoted to a general good time. This popular society has been organized for one year, and the members have heartily enjoyed the good times that they had, and look forward to another year with much anticipation of pleasure. A big time is being planned for the anniversary night which will be held on the evening of the 11th of October.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

GREEN.

It is our painful duty to again announce the death of another respected Emporium lady. MRS. MARY MARGARET LYNCH-GREEN, aged 65, wife of Hon. B. W. GREEN, passed away at one o'clock this (Thursday) morning, surrounded by her kind and faithful husband, daughter, Miss Alice and two sisters.

Feb. 25th, last, Mrs. Green, who had always been a robust and energetic lady, was taken sick and continued to grow worse, baffling the skill of the best physicians in Emporium, Williamsport and Philadelphia, having but recently returned from a second visit to the Methodist Hospital, and rapidly grew worse, until this morning, when she peacefully passed to her reward. During her long and painful illness everything that money and skill could command was lovingly and patiently procured.

Deceased was born at Towanda, Pa., and located in Emporium in 1869; on Dec. 16th 1886, she was married to Hon. B. W. Green.

In addition to the bereaved husband and niece, Miss Alice Montgomery Green, (legally adopted daughter of both Mr. and Mrs. Green), who has made her home with them since childhood; two sisters, Mrs. Lizzie Ceaflea, Antrim, Pa., Miss Ellen Lynch, Towanda, and one brother, Mr. James Lynch, of Towanda, Pa., are left to mourn her death—the sisters being at the bedside when her spirit took its fight to a better world.

The grim monster, death, has invaded many homes in Emporium during the past few months and called many of our neighbors and friends, but in no instance will the vacancy be more regretted than in the home of our friends and neighbors. "Aunt Mattie," who always had a cheerful word for her friends, leaves a void in that pleasant home and family, the church and the community, long to be revered. Would that time would permit of a more extended obituary, but that is impossible at this late hour.

Always of a domestic nature and never given much to society, yet she delighted to entertain her friends and neighbors. Being a model wife and excellent entertainer it was very many social functions that were given at their comfortable residence on Sixth street, many of those pleasant occasions it having been our honor to attend, as the guest of Judge Green and wife. Mrs. Green, who was well known to a majority of the citizens of this county, was always liberal to a fault and was ever ready to aid and assist the needy and afflicted, aiding all churches and societies when called upon. Respected by all, the death of this lady is deeply regretted and the afflicted husband and niece, who patiently ministered to her every want during the long ordeal of illness, have the profound sympathy of our citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Green were confirmed as members of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, on October 21, 1888, by the Rt. Rev. Cortland Whitehead, Bishop of the Diocese of Pittsburg, assisted by the then Rector, Rev. F. W. White; the deceased being very punctual and faithful in the discharge of her vows; ever ready and willing to assist in the church work, as a member of the Ladies Sewing Society, or any duty that would further the good work. She will be missed in more ways than one—in the home, the church and by our citizens generally.

The funeral will be held from the family residence Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, the religious services to be conducted by the Rev. M. L. Tate, Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church.

Taking on New Life.

William H. Logue, of Huntley, was in Emporium last Saturday attending to business. Mr. Logue informed ye editor that Huntley will take on new life in the very near future. Phillips & Co., will erect a saw mill for the manufacture of the timber on the Logue tracts. Also another firm are negotiation for site for a pail manufactory. Good for Huntley.

Variety Shower.

Last Thursday evening, the members of the Girl's Sewing Club, held a variety shower, at the home of Misses "Budd" and "Doll" Hogan. The shower was given in honor of Miss Lena Coyle, who will become the bride of Mr. Edward Foster, in the near future. Miss Coyle was the recipient of many useful and beautiful gifts. She has resigned her position in the department store of Mr. K. Kuehne, last Saturday being her last day in the store. Miss Dorothy Nelson has accepted the vacancy in the store.

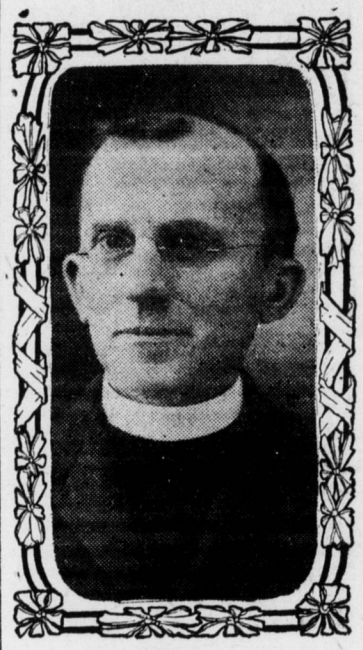
INSTITUTION OF NEW RECTOR.



REV. M. L. TATE, M. A., RECTOR

On Tuesday evening, the ladies of Emmanuel Episcopal Parish, gave a reception at the Parish House, to the in honor of new Rector, the Rev. M. L. Tate. About one hundred persons were present. Delicious refreshments were served by the ladies of the Church, assisted by several young ladies and gentlemen The reception was attended by many friends of the several other denominations.

WEDNESDAY'S SERVICES.

The services on Wednesday were begun by a celebration of the Holy Euchrist at seven o'clock, a. m., with the Ven. Reginald S. Radcliffe, Archdeacon of Erie and Rector of Grace Church at Ridgway, as Celebrant. The main service of the day started at ten o'clock, a. m. The procession formed at the Parish House and was composed of a choir of eighteen voices, the Rev. Mr. VanDyke, Rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, at Smethport, the Rev. Mr. Henry Mitchell, Rector of St. Agnes Episcopal Church, at St. Marys, the Rev. Dr. Jones, Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, at Erie, Rev. M. L Tate accompanied by the Hons. Josiah Howard and H. H. Mullin, and the Ven. R. S. Radcliffe, Archdeacon of Erie. The processional hymn was "Rejoice Ye Pure in Heart." Rev. Mr. VanDyke conducted the office of Morning Prayer and the Rev. Mr. Mitchell read the lessons. After the office of Morning Prayer was said, the office of Institution of the Rev. Martin Luther Tate, M. A.. was commenced. The Archdeacon made the opening Remarks and prayers, which were followed by a leter of Institution, signed and sealed by the Rt. Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, Bishop of the Diocese of Pittsburg, empowering the Archdeacon to hold the Institution, was read by the Hon. Josiah Howard. The Hon. H. H. Mullin, acting, in the absence of Hon. B. W. Green, as Senior Warden, of the Parish, presented the keys of the Parish to Rev. Tate and they were accepted by him. Rev. Tate was then received into the Chancel by the Archdeacon, who in turn presented him with the books of the Church, after which he pronounced his benediction. Rev. Dr. Jones was the preacher of the day and preached a very able sermon, taking as his text, Phil. 2:18, which reads "Holding Forth of the Word of Life." A short sketch of the sermon which he delivered to the newly instituted Rector is as follows: "My Brother, the Rev. Martin Luther Tate, M. A., we welcome you into the pastoral relation in the Parish of Godly people. We are more than glad that you have come at this time when we are on the eve of erecting a new Diocese. I have felt that as "Holding Forth of the Word of Life" has been encourged and blessed with a large, beautiful and prayerful ministry in this place. So shall it be in your hands. Emporium will always rank high in the appreciation of us all, not only for its personal worth. but because of the indomitable spirit and faithful purpose and toil. We want for this proposed new diocese, a Bishop who is essentially one who oves this work and this people, one who can be at home with the humblest as well as the most polished members of society—a countryman and a citizen—a man in every whit a man—a true Christian gentleman. When you and I, and your people and my people, because they are the people of God, will be blessed both in time and eternity through the "Holding Forth of the Word of Life." During the receiving of the offertory, the Choir rendered an anthem "Oh How Amiable are Thy Dwellings." This was followed by the celebration of the Holy Eucharist, the Rev. Martin Luther Tate. M. A., being the Celebrant, assisted by the visiting priests and the Archdeacon. The recessional hymn was "Onward Ever Onward." Mrs. E Mead Floyd presided at the organ during these services and Mr. W. S. Sterner was the music director. Following were the members of the Choir: Mrs. M. L. App, of Port Allegany, Miss Hazel Floyd, Olean, N. Y., Misses Carolyn Moore, Ina Hopple, Margaret Crandell, Jennie Craven Minnie Barguelt, Ethel Fisher, Elizabeth Crandell, Belle Campbell, Mable Foster, Elizabeth Ludlam, Mrs. Guy S. Felt and Messrs. Geo. A. Walker, Charles E. Lentze, Robert Kaye and Arthur R. Catlin. The Church was very tastefully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants. All the services were very largely attended.

Cameron County Lady Farmer.

Miss Margaret S. Farley, of Mason Hill, came to Emporium on Saturday to transact business and while in town made our sanctum a social and business visit, renewing her PRESS well into 1911. Miss Farley, who was a professional nurse and graduate from one of Pennsylvania's foremost institutions, gave up her chosen profession to assist her father, our old friend and Stalwart Republican, Jos. Farley, with his farm. Upon the death of her father she continued to reside on the farm and has successfully conducted the farm to the present time, contented and happy. There is no more economical and successful farmer in Cameron county than this excellent lady.

United Irish League.

Chas L. Butler, proprietor of Commercial Hotel at this place, accompanied by the silver tongued orator, Mr. P. B. McNulty, of Ridgway, are attending the great meeting of the United Irish League at Buffalo this week both being enthusiastic members. Buffalo, is bedecked in grand style in honor of the occasion and is without a doubt the greenest city in the world to-day. Not a yard of yellow ribbon is in sight in Buffalo, even the ladies are wearing green sash ribbon.

Opera House.

John T. Howard has placed a new $400 piano in the opera house and we are glad to note, manifests a disposition to either fit up that place of amusement, or dispose of the same to parties who will do so. Emporium certainly deserves a more modern and up-to-date theatre, in keeping with the rapid advancement of our town, conceeded to be one of the best show towns in this section. We certainly hope Mr. Howard will seriously consider this matter and give the amusement loving public what we greatly need.

Popular Clergyman.

The Venerable Archdeacon Radcliffe, of Ridgway, who is a great favorite with all who know him, was a very welcome PRESS visitor yesterday. The Rev. gentleman conducted the installation services at Emmanuel Church yesterday morning, assisted by other Priests.

Monument Dedication.

Over 20,000 old Vets and their wives assembled on the Gettysburg battlefield on Monday to witness the unveiling of the monument erected by the State of Pennsylvania, at a cost of $175,000. Congressman Barclay and Capt J. C. Johnson witnessed the ceremony. It was a beautiful sight. We wish every reader of the PRESS could visit this battlefield. Capt. Barclay and Capt. Johnson were captured on this field and passed several months in the rebel pens.

New York Republicans.

The Old Guard and ex-President Theodore Roosevelt crossed bats in New York Republican Convention. Roosevelt was elected temporary president, defeating Vice President Sherman by 101 votes. We reserve our opinion of the fight.

Passing of the Once Despised Hemlock.

Justice of the Peace W. E. Barr, of Hicks Run, was an agreeable PRESS visitor on Monday. Squire Barr says many of the young men have left that place for western points, on account of the DuBois mill being reduced to day trick only.

The DuBois Express, published at Mr. DuBois' home, says:

For several years the big saw mill of J. E. DuBois at Hicks Run was run both night and day, turning out the finished lumber at a fast slip, but about three weeks ago the night shift was taken off, so that the mill is turning out just about half the aggregate product at the present time. Although the big operation has been eating up the trees at a rapid pace, it is stated that there is still sufficient timber to keep the mill running for the next two years steadily. When this tract of timber is finished up, it will mean that the last big section in this neighborhood has been sawed, there remaining for consumption the Goodyear tracts and the Central Lumber company tracts, both of which will be finished in short order. The nearest big tract is the Goodyear holdings on Potato Creek.

When the operation at Hicks Run is finished up the entire equipment together with the working force, will probably be moved to the Pacific coast, where Mr. DuBois has extensive holdings, he being rated as the largest individual holder of timber in the United States. It is not likely that the holdings on the western slope will be extensively worked until after the opening of the Panama canal when the eastern markets will be of easy access by boat, thus cutting down traffic charges.

Public Orchard Meetings.

Results of the year's work to be studied in the State Model Orchards.

There will be a public meeting in the orchard of F. X. Blumle, near Emporium, on Thursday, Oct. 6th, 1910, for the purpose of showing the benefits resulting from improved methods in use in the Model Orchards conducted under the co-operation of the Division of Zoology of the State Department of Agriculture.

This is one of a series of Fall Meetings held throughout the State at this season. At these meetings treated trees will be compared with those not treated, and sprayed fruit shown beside unsprayed grown under the same conditions.

Lectures will be delivered by experts from the Department, and an opportunity given for asking questions. Determinations of specimens will be made, and growers are invited to bring twigs of diseased or infested trees for identification.

The Model Orchard Movement was inaugurated several years ago by Prof H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist, for the purpose of familiarizing the farmer and fruit grower with the best practical measures available for the control of destructive pests, and in order to show how well these operations have succeeded meetings are held in the orchards where both fruits and trees can be examined by all who attend.

The session begins at one o'clock, P. M. The State's representatives will be presents rain or shine.

Making Good.

Claude E. Rentz, formerly of this place, is making good as a mechanical draftsman and has secured a good position with the Pittsburg Valve, Foundry and Construction Company, at that place. Claude will also take instruction in the night classes at the Carnegie Technical School, this being the beginning of his third term at the school. He has been employed in the offices of the West Penn Railways Company at Connellsville, Pa., during the summer months and had a flattering offer to remain with the company. Claude is bound to make good and we wish him all kinds of success. He keeps posted on the doings of his Emporium friends by reading the PRESS every week.

"Billy, the Kid."

The popular Western Melodrama, "Billy, the Kid," which will be the next attraction at the Opera House has been seen several times during the past seasons in New York and is said to have proven eminently satisfactory to the melodramatic audiences who have seen it. The plot of the story revolves about Billy, whose father has been murdered. Billy takes an oath to avenge his death and in the ensuing complications becomes an outlaw. There is much good comedy introduced to lighten up the more strenuous portions of the plot, and a pretty love story runs through the entire four acts. The scenic settings are unique in the naturalness represented, and the supporting company is highly spoken of. At Opera House next Monday, Oct. 3.

Where Labor Lacks Protection.

Troublous times for capital and labor have developed in Free Trade England.

Disputes in various branches of industry, which seem to have passed beyond the possibility of settlement by arbitration, threaten to precipitate, very shortly, a lockout that will affect employees of railroads, shipyards, mines and cotton mills to the number of 650,000.

The London Spectator says that this unrest in the industrial world may conceivably be due to the Socialist propaganda which teaches that the employer is the natural enemy of his employees, preaches always the doctrine of discontent, and advocate political action by organized labor.

Whatever may be the various causes that combine to produce the disturbed condition, the fact that it exists in a country in which labor has not the benefit of a Protective Tariff stands out conspicuously against the contention of American advocates of Tariff reduction that adoption of their policy would improve the condition of the wage workers.—Albany Journal.

Delightful Entertainment.

A few months ago the church going people of our community were delightfully entertained at the Baptist Church on Sunday evening when the regular service gave way for a special service entitled, "The Pink Rose." The story and music were well rendered and another such service was asked for. Next Sunday evening a similar service, entitled "His Mother's Sermon," will be rendered by the choir. The story is laid in Old Scotland where a young Theologian is called to fill the pulpit of the Free Kirk in Drumtachty. The author of the story, the late "Ian Maclaren" was one of the most eminent platform men of late years and a writer of great ability. We are sure that a large audience will turn for out this service.

SEEKS PARTY UNITY

APPEAL IN PRESIDENT TAFT'S RECENT LETTER.

Chief Executive Shows How Important It Is to the Country That Republican Government Control Shall Continue.

President Taft's letter to Chairman McKinley has had the effect of placing the campaign on the high level of patriotism and making party unity the stepping stone to party success. In concluding his recital of the results thus far attained by the Sixty-first congress the president says:

"It is of the utmost importance to make this a campaign of education as to facts and to clear away the clouds of misrepresentation that have obscured the real issues and have made it difficult to secure for the Republican majorities in congress the real credit due them from the country for the tremendous task they have accomplished. If this is brought clearly home to all voters, and especially to the young men now voting for the first time, and they become impressed, as they ought to be by this record, with the difference in the governmental efficiency and capacity of the Republican and Democratic parties, they will enroll themselves with the party of construction and progress rather than with the party of obstruction and negation, and the resulting legislation of the Sixty-second congress will vindicate their choice."

As the president truly says at the outset of his letter: "The question will be not what complexion of Republicanism one prefers, but whether it is better for the country to have the Republican party control the legislation for the next two years and further redeem its promises, or to enable a Democratic majority in the house either to interpose a veto to Republican measures, or to formulate and pass bills to carry out Democratic principles."

The great issue, then, is whether the Republican or Democratic party is to be in control of the next house of representatives, and the president has given us all a platform on which to stand, has sounded a keynote and given us rallying ground where all can meet in common cause against an irresponsible political party of incapacity and repudiation. Mr. Taft makes it clear that the constructive work of the Republican party would not only be halted but perhaps annulled by a Democratic house of representatives.

Regarding the tariff the president reiterates his well-known views expressed at various times during the past year. He emphasizes the turning of a deficit of $58,000,000 into a surplus of $26,000,000; calls attention to the splendid operation of the maximum and minimum feature and the work of the tariff board, adding that: "All Republicans—conservative, progressive and radical—may well abide the situation with respect to the tariff until evidence now being accumulated shall justify changes in the rates."

In particularly happy vein does the president enumerate and discuss the work of the last session of congress: the advanced railroad legislation, the postal savings bank act, the conservation measures and particularly the laws affecting labor. On this latter point he says:

"The Republican party at the last session of congress again exhibited its deep and sincere interest in the general welfare of the working men and women of the country by adding important enactments to its already long record of legislation on this subject."

And then he mentions the long list of bills passed and pending in the interest of the working classes, adding: "No more important legislation in the interest of human life has ever been enacted by congress than the laws of the recent session."

Crooked Democratic Methods.

Speaking on behalf of Mr. Kern, Mr. Bryan upholds the temperance cause in attractive phrase, in the hope that temperance men may see their way clear to vote the Democratic ticket. Simultaneously the brewerytzed Democratic machine in this state is seeking a "wet" Democratic legislature so as to repeal the county option law.

Great stress is laid by Democratic missionaries throughout Indiana upon Mr. Kern's denunciation of Senator Shively as a brewery attorney and the brewers for having bought the legislature of 1909. Simultaneously Mr. Kern eulogizes this same brewery attorney and the brewerized Democratic machine invites us to elect a "wet" Democratic legislature to repeal the local option law.

As a supporter of county option and a temperance man Mr. Bryan recommends Mr. Kern to the people of Indiana as another good temperance man and the efficient godfather of the Nicholson law, hoping that a Democratic legislature may be elected to send Mr. Kern to the senate. Simultaneously the brewerized Democratic machine in this state is laboring for a "wet" Democratic legislature to repeal the county option law.

Does the actual moral sensibility of Bryan, Kern and Marshall detect in all this any confusion of ideas, any seeming inconsistency of purpose, and unprincipled program of double dealing from which honest men might be tempted to recoil? Apparently not. Apparently they think that all total abstinence, local option citizens may cheerfully and sagaciously unite to elect a "wet" Democratic legislature for the express purpose of repealing the option law.—Indianapolis Star.

WHAT IS TO BE HOPED FOR?

Voters May Well Ask Themselves This Question Before Giving Support to Democrats.

"The size of the Democratic victory that will be announced on the morning of November 9 will be staggering. It will include an overwhelming majority in the house of representatives and a gain of many United States senators. Ohio, the president's own state, will be lost to the Republicans. New York, the state of the ex-president, will be sweepingly Democratic. Majorities will be so large that people will tire of computing them."—New York World, Thursday, August 25, 1910.

If the result is thus certain, and everything is over except the shouting, it is pertinent to inquire what the country will get as a consequence of the revolution, says the New York Globe. If the overwhelming majority of us are to invest our ballots as indicated what dividends will be paid? What is the Democratic program? What will we be voting in? Practical persons desire an answer to these questions, for political matters affect business, and business conditions affect every man's material welfare.

It is hardly worth while to go back to the Democratic platform to get a statement of Democratic purpose. Mr. Bryan wrote that platform, and recent events have indicated that Mr. Bryan is no longer in command. To what, then, shall we turn for a statement? The voices of individual Democrats are numerous, but they are contradictory. No one can gather from them with any surety what is present-day orthodox doctrine. It is not going too far to say that Democratic authority can be quoted in favor of and against practically every known political and economical proposal. A sad state of muddle exists on the Republican side, but its stream is clear and crystal compared with the Democratic muddiness. Mr. Hearst has indicated that he proposes to be a Democrat this year; so have many of Mr. Cleveland's friends; so have not a few former Republicans and independents, some of them on the ground that the Republican party is entirely too radical and others on the ground that it isn't radical enough.

In the absence of other authority, one turns with some measure of hope to the campaign book recently issued by the Democratic congressional committee. Here is something official. Party funds have paid for its printing. It has been compiled by duly authorized agents and editors, and it contains what is to be regarded as the latest orthodox Democratic doctrine. It is a copious book, having no less than 512 pages. But alas! the reading of it but increases confusion. What will the Democratic party attempt to do if it gets control of the house and senate? It is not stated—not even hinted. There is plentiful complaint, page after page, of what the Republicans have done, but not a suggestion concerning the line of conduct it is proposed to substitute.

One Year of the Tariff.

Those persons who got themselves committed against the Payne tariff act before it had a chance either to justify or condemn itself in actual practice, have no comfort from the returns of the treasury department. So consistent is the favorable story from month to month, from quarter to quarter, and now for the whole year, that the critics have to turn to ancient history for consolation. They must appeal from the relentless logic of results, as recorded in the customs returns, to the flawless logic of their own extra-session speeches, as printed in the "Congressional Record" between March 15 and August 7, 1909.

What does a year of the Payne act show? As the treasury department recites, it shows ordinary customs receipts $15,000,000 above those of the banner fiscal year 1907, and $75,000,000 in excess of receipts for "any other year of our national life except 1907." There was a deficit of $58,739,955 in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1909; there is a surplus for the year just ended of more than $20,000,000, the corporation tax law, passed as a complement to the Payne act, contributing $27,099,934.

Thus the tariff has turned a deficit into a surplus; it has been a successful revenue raiser, and therefore accomplished the primary purpose for which import duties are levied. This it has done by stimulating importations, and the only way to stimulate them is by lowering duties, by real "revision downward." This revision downward, the returns show, takes the form of rates a little lower than those of the Wilson act and averaging 11½ per cent lower than those of the Dingley act; it has been accompanied by a greatly enlarged free list. The rapid increase in importations offers some little ground for regret, but for reasons precisely opposite to those advanced in Iowa and Wisconsin. It suggests that a greater flood than was anticipated is pouring over the lowered tariff wall.—New York Evening Mail.

Doctrine Hard to Define.

Does anybody know where the Democratic party really "is at?" In Virginia one Democratic member of congress who repudiated the tariff-for-revenue-only national platform and voted for protecting American industries was "turned down" when seeking re-election, while another who took precisely the same course carried the primaries by a big majority. What is Democratic doctrine, anyway?

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

JURIST ON THE RACE TRACK

Exchanging a seat on the federal bench of the old Oklahoma Territory for a seat on a sulkey behind fast-stepping trotters and pacers and filling both places in a satisfactory manner, John L. Pancoast, now a resident of Blackwell, northern Oklahoma, has been making the Oklahoma-Kansas racing circuit the past summer with a string of horses that have pulled down numerous purses for their erstwhile ermine-wearer owner.

The love of horse flesh is the only reason why Judge Pancoast has changed from bench to sulkey. He is still a practising attorney and is admitted to practise before the United States Supreme court, but he prefers to see the steppers coming down the home stretch in a whirl of dust and hear the shouts of the onlookers as the animal he is driving perhaps noses out a head under the wire.

Judge Pancoast was always a devotee of the racetrack. He has always owned a string of fast horses and during his days on the bench he watched with interest the progress of his horses. In early life, however, in Ohio, where he was born, in 1852, and admitted to the bar in 1878, he made up his mind that he would some day wear the ermine. This fact he kept steadfastly before him. He had that "bee in his bonnet" when he located in western Kansas in 1879, going through with the usual experience of a young lawyer and afterwards moving to Oklahoma.

During territorial days in Oklahoma the federal judges named by the president were also the district judges of the territory and in addition to being district judges, the seven of them sitting together at the capital constituted the supreme bench of the territory. Thus John L. Pancoast became not only a federal judge, but also judge of the Seventh Oklahoma district with headquarters at Alva and a member of the territorial supreme bench with the title of associate justice.

Pancoast was appointed in 1902 by President Roosevelt and again in 1906 by the same president. Being a judge on the bench, with his one ambition in life realized, Pancoast did not forget his horses. It was his one relief from the bench, his vacation, his pastime, his fad. He served as judge until statehood abolished the court.

CIRCLES GLOBE IN AN AUTO

Mrs. Harriet Clark Fisher of Trenton, N. J., holds the unique record of being the only woman who has girdled the earth in an automobile. Mrs. Fisher's trip in her 40-horsepower machine makes new history in the automobile world, and particularly in the realm of women. With her on the trip were her secretary, Harold Fisher Brooks, who drove; a man and maid servant and Honk Honk, her pet bull terrier, who was taken along as a mascot. In addition, the car, which was especially built for the trip, carried a complete stock of tires, parts and cooking utensils.

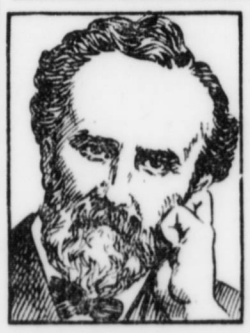
The party landed in France, toured leisurely through it; thence through Germany and Switzerland; crossed to Italy, where a brief stay was made at Como. Thence they visited Vienna, Rome, Naples and Port Said, taking ship from there to India. Mrs. Fisher's letters referring to their experiences are interesting in the extreme.

"It was exciting," she wrote. "We live like gypsies most of the time. We found hotels few and far between. You never saw a more surprised set of people than were the natives when we would roll into one of their little villages. In the country between Bombay and Calcutta we preferred to camp out. When we got to China we had our troubles, but our most exciting experiences were in Japan. We started from Kobe and went from there to Osaka, and thence to Kyoto, Nagoka, Skidgonka, Atmi, Odawara and Yokohama, bound for Tokyo. We found the streets so narrow, that in many instances our automobile barely grazed through them. We were forced to run our car over bridges that were old and unreliable, and many times we feared we would plunge through them.

"We were also obliged to cross on small ferries, and one of these trips, across Hamana bay, was three miles in length. To get across here we had to lash two fishing boats together and build a temporary platform on which to run the car."

The party met with several exceptionally exciting experiences that came near sending them back. After landing in San Francisco and starting east across her own country, Mrs. Fisher's trip was uneventful except for her arrest in Sandusky, O., for exceeding the speed limit.

AN ENGLISH PRISON EXPERT



At the invitation of the United States government Thomas Holmes comes from England to attend the International Prison conference. Mr. Holmes is the secretary of the Howard association in London, which is devoted to the double work of reforming prison administration. He is admittedly the foremost of practical English criminologists. He has made a lifelong study of criminals. Before he became the secretary of the Howard association he was for many years a court missionary.

For a long time Mr. Holmes has been advocating the right of offenders to pay their fines by installments and thus, in a measure, equalizing the glaring disparity in treatment which the law makes between the rich and the poor. At present the poor man or youth who commits some trifling offense—is bundled off to jail if he cannot immediately hand over the pecuniary atonement for his misdemeanor which blind justice demands of him. On the other hand, the offender with a well-lined pocket, to whom the payment of the fine is no hardship, escapes the ignominy of imprisonment altogether.

Now, Mr. Holmes seems to be within measurable distance of getting his pet reform adopted by legal enactment. A few days ago, on behalf of the Howard association, he obtained an official interview with Winston Churchill, the home secretary, whose special business it is to look after the administration of justice, and Mr. Churchill since then has announced his intention of inaugurating this reform.

A PICTURESQUE PITTSBURGER

The most picturesque millionaire in Pittsburg and one of the most bizarre in the country is Alexander R. Peacock, who recently came into public notice on account of a bad egg. Because he got one for breakfast he spent nearly $70,000 to start a hennery with which to supply his table with eggs fresh from the nest. He has the reputation of being the most irascible individual in Pittsburg. What happened to his chef when Mr. Peacock tasted the cold storage egg that caused all the trouble may be imagined. After he had relieved his feelings he called up a real estate dealer.

"I want a farm," he said, "a farm that is big enough to raise a lot of chickens."

Before night the real estate man had the farm; within two days a chicken house, 200 feet long and 30 feet wide, was well under way. The farm cost $60,000, and the henhouse about one-tenth that sum. It has been rushed to completion. It has steam heat, electric lights, tile flooring and electric incubators. Mr. Peacock received the first of his very expensive but superlatively fresh eggs recently.

Peacock's life story reads like an oriental romance. He was a clerk at the linen counter of a Pittsburg dry goods store when in the course of his duties he became acquainted with Mr. Carnegie. The ironmaster took a liking to the young Scotch lad, aided him in various ways, and his career thenceforth was meteoric.

Doctor Waggoner smiled.

ZOOLOGY of DISEASES

By LETTAR BLAIR

SURGEON GENERAL WYMAN of the public health service has been buying such quantities of live rabbits lately, for use in his business, that, in response to inquiry, he has felt obliged to explain that the animals are wanted not for vivisection, but for the manufacture of serums and antitoxins. They are dosed with small quantities of disease germs again and again until, having been "hyperimmunized" by this means, their blood contains an anti-poison utilizable as a cure for the malady, whatever it may be, in human beings.

Mithridates of old, the celebrated king of Pontus, was so afraid of being poisoned, that he dosed himself constantly with small quantities of various kinds of poisons in order that he might become in a measure proof against them. Practically the same method is adopted by the public health service, which, in the manner described, "hyperimmunizes" such animals as sheep, horses, cows and rabbits, with a view to the subsequent employment of their blood for the cure or prevention of disease. It is by this means, for instance, that diphtheria antitoxin is obtained.

By the same means it is hoped to secure a satisfactory serum for the treatment or prevention of the bubonic plague. Already, in India, the plague "vaccine" has been obtained—made by breeding the germs of the disease in beef soup, and then killing them by heat, the resulting fluid being administered by hypodermic injection. This is a matter of extreme importance, inasmuch as the malady in question is at the present time threatening to ravage our own country.

Our government, during the last fiscal year, spent $650,000 in fighting the plague on the Pacific coast, and within the next twelve months it will expend about $1,000,000 for the same purpose. From this fact it may be judged that the situation in regard to the bubonic disease—or black death, as it used to be called—in the United States just now is far from cheerful, notwithstanding the efforts of the health authorities to minimize alarm on the subject.

The truth is that this most dreaded and destructive of all human maladies seems to have obtained a secure foothold on the Pacific coast, where small epidemics of it have broken out in several of the larger cities within the last three years. But the most serious feature of the situation lies in the circumstance that the bubonic infection has already become widely spread among the rats of the towns and the ground squirrels of the rural districts in that region.

The plague is a rat disease primarily. It is conveyed to human beings (as well as to ground squirrels) by the flea. A flea bites a plague-sick rat and, later on, it bites a man, thus inoculating the latter with the deadly infection.

It is only through quite remarkable good luck that the malady has not already made its appearance at our principal Atlantic seaports. This may well happen, and the public health service (which has its headquarters at Washington) has had for some time past a complete plan of campaign mapped out to meet such an emergency.

Immense quantities of grain and other merchandise are constantly being shipped from San Francisco and other Pacific coast ports to the East. Rats are often transported with such merchandise, as involuntary passengers, hidden in grain sacks, or otherwise. Let one or two plague-stricken specimens be delivered in New York and the metropolis would be likely soon to have an epidemic on its hands—the first warning of the outbreak being afforded by the finding of large numbers of dead and dying rats about the wharves and in the streets.

To fight the mischief, if it once got started in New York, the municipality would be obliged to wage a war of extermination against rats. This would involve an expenditure of many millions of dollars—much money being required not only for the wholesale trapping and poisoning of the animals, but also for the ratproofing of sewers, houses and particularly buildings used for the storage of food supplies. Experience has shown that the only way to get rid of such vermin is to deprive them of food and hiding places. tribution among human beings on two tribution among human being on two animals—the rat and the flea. It serves very strikingly to illustrate what might be called the modern zoological aspect of diseases. The working laboratory of the public health service in Washington is today, indeed, a sort of station for natural history research, and an official zoologist, Dr. Charles W. Stiles, is in charge of one of its most important departments.

Nowadays, when the study of a disease is begun, suspicions are always entertained against one or more animals, as possibly accountable for the trouble directly or indirectly—just as, for example, the African crocodile is charged with maintaining in its blood the parasite of "sleeping sickness," which the dreaded tsetse fly (after biting the saurian, as is alleged) conveys to human beings. Similarly, in our own country, the malignant anemia, which afflicts hundreds of thousands of people in the south, has been absolutely proved to be due to a minute "hookworm" that bores through the skin of the feet and, making its way to the intestine, establishes itself there as a bloodsucker.

Such problems keep the government health authorities moving. As soon as one is solved another turns up—as, for instance, in the case of the mysterious "spotted fever," which has been making so much trouble lately in the mountainous regions of Montana and adjacent Rocky Mountain states. It is an entirely new complaint, but extremely fatal, four out of every five persons attacked by it in the Bitter Root valley (where it assumes its most virulent form) passing speedily from the sick bed to the burying ground. A characteristic symptom is an eruption of pimply red spots all over the body.

Investigation has proved that this disease is due to a "germ" of some sort—presumably a bacterium, but so minute as not to be visible under the microscope—which is carried by a certain species of wood tick. There is no question of the accountability of the tick, for the malady has been successfully transmitted, in an experimental way, through the medium of its bite, from guinea pig to guinea pig, from monkey to monkey and even from human being to human being (in two (volunteer) instances. Some of the insects were brought to Washington and encouraged to lay eggs, which were duly hatched by Dr. Stiles; but it does not appear that more than a very small minority of them, in a state of nature, are infected. These exceptional individuals probably acquire their infection by biting some animal which harbors the germ, but what animal that is, nobody knows.

Speaking of volunteers, there seems never to be any lack of them, where risks have to be run in the experimental study of diseases. It does not matter how deadly the malady may be, there are always men ready to take their lives in their hands for such purposes, often without reward. Such was the case when a call was issued in Cuba, in 1900, for soldiers willing to expose themselves to the bites of mosquitoes carrying the infection of yellow fever. It was the case again recently, when Capt. Charles F. Craig, of the army medical corps, wanted men in the Philippines for a practical test of his theory that dengue, or "breakbone" fever, owes its distribution to a mosquito of another species—the night-flying culex fatigans, an insect already positively known to be the carrier of the parasite threadworm which causes elephantiasis.

Wherever one looks, in the study of diseases, one finds animals of various kinds acting as the carriers of the germs which make the mischief. Science as yet has made only a beginning in this sort of investigative work. The Anopheles mosquito is known to be the sole conveyor and distributor of the malaria microbe; but where did the microbe of malaria come from originally? It is, as everybody knows, a protozoon—that is to say, an animal organism of a low form; but its origin is a puzzle.

The same thing might be said of the bacterial parasites that cause yellow fever and dengue. It is thought they are closely related, the symptoms they produce being somewhat similar, but nobody ever saw either of them. Like the germs of measles and scarlet fever, they are so minute as to be invisible, even under a high-power microscope.

As for dengue, to find some way of combatting it was of special importance from the viewpoint of the war department, because it was of very troublesome in the Philippines, breaking out in "explosive epidemics," and incapacitating entire companies for fighting purposes with a simultaneousness most distressing. The manner of its spread was such as obviously to suggest an insect agency, and culex fatigans, always most plentiful where and when dengue appeared, was naturally suspected.

To test the theory, Captain Craig exposed a number of soldiers (volunteering for the purpose in response to an offer of $200 apiece) to the bites of mosquitoes of this species which had already bitten men sick with dengue. Twenty or thirty of the insects, hatched from eggs in the laboratory, were first liberated under the mosquito bar of a dengue-sick soldier, in order that they might attack him and become infected, and, a few hours later, they were removed and placed beneath the mosquito bar of a well man. In every such instance the malady was successfully reproduced; and, as a result, dengue patients are now treated in the wards of ordinary hospitals, no fear of contagion being entertained so long as mosquitoes are prevented from getting at the sufferers and thus acquiring the infection for distribution among other people.

The greatest of all medical puzzles at the present time is cancer. Mortality from other diseases is steadily diminishing, owing to improvements in sanitation and in methods of treatment, but this dreadful malady is killing people faster every year. Out of every eight women who pass the age of forty, one dies of cancer. In all likelihood the reason why the germ has never been discovered is that, like the microbes of yellow fever and measles, it is so tiny as to be ultra-microscopic. Probably it is carried by one or more of the lower animals, and science at the present time is engaged in a far-reaching inquiry with a view to solving this branch of the problem. Mice have been accused, and fishes likewise, but no near approach seems to have been made to a solution of the mystery. If only the secret, doubtless a simple one, were known, the discovery of a cure for cancer would not be long postponed.

A Good Retort.

It is told of a successful comedian that his first bit of popularity was gained in a rough mining town where he was giving "impersonations" in a hall to a large but unpleasantly critical audience.

He was young, and not exactly at his ease, and the freely-delivered comments which greeted him on his appearance were not reassuring; but he kept on, and gained in confidence. Some of the audience, however, had come prepared to amuse themselves, and did not propose to be balked.

After one really commendable impersonation there was a round of applause, but in the midst of it a great cabbage landed on the stage at the actor's feet.

He picked it up, examined it, and then gazing out over the audience with the bland and innocent expression which has since become one of his assets, he said:

"Thank you. This is more than I had any reason to expect. It is the first time any one has ever lost his head over my acting.—Youth's Companion.

Documents in Unknown Tongue.

Some documents from central Asia have been acquired by the Asiatic society of Bengal from a Montenegrin. They consist of five leaves of brownish yellow paper, measuring eight inches by 5¾ inches.

The significance of these five leaves, the genuineness of which cannot be doubted, is that scholars are here confronted with a number of consecutive passages in a language to which no clew has yet been found, and of which hitherto only fragments have been rescued from the sands of central Asia.

It is possible that by means of these five leaves an important literary language of whose existence the world had no suspicion may be rescued from oblivion. The paging on the reverse of each leaf shows that they once formed a part of an extensive work.

PROPER TREATMENT FOR OVERHEATED WORK HORSE

It Is Important to Know That Exhaustion From Summer Heat May Be Prevented—Clean Stable, Feed and Air Essential.

(By A. S. ALEXANDER, Wisconsin.)

When during the hot weather the hard worked horse suddenly stops sweating, lags, weakens, pants and has hot dry skin and extremely reddened membranes of the eyes, nose and mouth he is suffering from heat exhaustion and by using the thermometer it would be found that his temperature is over 106 degrees.

Unless a horse in this condition is immediately rested, put in a cool, shady, breezy place and there cooled off he will be likely to fall and die of heat apoplexy or "sun stroke."

It therefore is well to know and look out for the symptoms here outlined and then be able to treat them intelligently. In the first place it is important to remember that heat exhaustion may be largely prevented:

By keeping the horse's stable clean, airy, perfectly ventilated, darkened and screened in summer time.

Feeding the best of foods in adequate but not extreme quantities.

Making no sudden changes of food.

Allowing plenty of cool, pure drinking water.

Permitting ample time for rest at noon.

Removing the harness during such rest periods.

Not overworking any horse and always changing frequently the middle horse of a three horse team, as he suffers fearfully from the direct rays of the sun. Also shade the polls of horses at work and in such a way that air can pass under the shading hat or other cover.

When a horse shows symptoms of heat exhaustion stop work, stand him under a tree where there is a breeze, shower his body with cold water from a sprinkling can, keep cold wet packs to the poll of his head and give him large, frequent doses of stimulants such as whisky in strong cold coffee.

Do not bleed him or give him aconite or other poisonous drugs. Repeat the dose of stimulant every half hour at first and every hour or two as he gains strength and the fever abates.

A good stimulant is prepared by mixing together one part of aromatic spirits of ammonia and two parts each of alcohol and sweet spirits of nitre. Of this give two ounces in a pint of water or cold coffee as one dose.

If he is bloated give four ounces of hyposulphite of soda dissolved in water and inject soapy cold water and glycerine into the rectum once an hour until relieved. In case of sun stroke call in the graduate veterinarian as soon as possible.

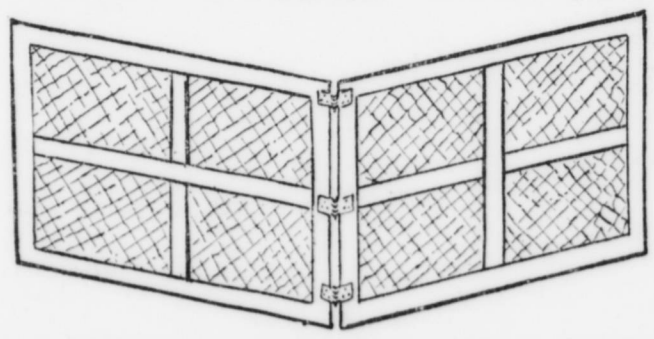
HINGED HURDLER FOR SWINE



Instead of chasing pigs and having them running in every direction, make a V-shaped hurdler as shown in the illustration, says Farm Press. The frame is light wood and the webbing is made by two thicknesses of close mesh wire fencing with water-proofed building paper between. A stiff wooden brace runs each way through the center so the fencing may be stretched tight. It is light and so strong that it is almost indestructible. With one of these rigs you can build a narrow lane on one side of the pen and move it ahead as the hog moves. He sees the opening ahead and walks that way to get out. Hogs may be coaxed with a rig of this kind when it is impossible to drive them where you want them to go.

EXTINCTION OF EARLY EQUINES

Much Mystery Surrounds Disappearance of American Horse—Attributed by Some to Increasing Cold

Over three centuries ago, at the time of the Spanish conquest, there was not to be found in the new world, so it has been practically proved, a single animal that answered to the description of the horse. Horses, indeed, which the Spanish brought with them, were objects at first of great terror to the natives, who took them to be four-legged supernatural beings come purposely to aid the conquerors. Yet recent research by the Whitney mission has established beyond doubt that long before Columbus the Americas were overrun by horses from the mountains of Alaska to the plains of Patagonia, says Harper's Weekly.

In 1826 the chance discovery in New Jersey of an equine fossil of an unknown kind, led to more methodical investigation of America, with the result that pre-historic horse bones have been found in California and Oregon; between the Gulf of Mexico and the Carolinas; in Texas, Florida and the valleys of Mexico; in the basin of the Mississippi and on the western slopes of the Rocky mountains. Horses, too, must have been numerous in this country previous to the appearance of man, researches having brought to light their fossilized remains mixed up with pottery and the stone arms of cave dwellers.

How is it, then, that the equine race, represented in America by kinds of fossils considerably more numerous than in Europe, came for a time to vanish from this country to reappear thousands of centuries later with the Spanish conquest? For but a century after Cortez there were already in existence herds of wild horses in the regions of the mata and the prairies of the far west.

By some this temporary extinction of the American horse has been attributed to the increasing cold and the encroachments of the glacial hemisphere. It is certain that the elephant and camel disappeared at the same time. Another explanation is that the horses succumbed to a malady such is the "rinderpest" in South Africa. Again, what brought about this exodus may possibly have been a species of the present-day Columbian vampire bat, which sucks the life blood of its victims, and in the districts it infests prevents the horse being used as a beast of burden.

The Only Way.

Many Emporium Citizens Have Discovered It.

Just what to do when the kidneys are affected is a question that concerns both young and old. Weak kidneys neglected in childhood lead to life-long suffering. People of advanced years, with less vitality, suffer doubly. In youth or age, languor, backache, urinary irregularity, dizziness and nervousness make life a burden.

There is one remedy that acts directly on the kidneys and cures these troubles. Doan's Kidney Pills owe their world-wide fame to the fact that they cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Follow the example of this Emporium citizen and you will be convinced that this is so.

Mrs F Mundy, Fourth street, Emporium, Pa., says: Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at Taggart's Drug Store, brought the best of results in my case. It was some years ago that I first used this remedy, but I still hold a high opinion of it."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents, Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Pays Debt 75 Years Old.

A man 75 years old may not have had occasion to pay a debt, and yet if he finds he is losing his grip he owes it to himself to take Sexine Pills, when he knows they are the sure thing that will tone him up and prolong his life. Price $1 a box, six boxes $5, with full guarantee for any form of nerve weakness in men or women. Address or call on R. C. Dobson, Druggist, Emporium, Pa., where they sell all the principal remedies and do not substitute.

News Snapshots Of the Week

New York state's political conventions are attracting much attention just now, the Republicans witnessing the battle for temporary chairman between Vice President Sherman, aided by William Barnes, Jr., and Timothy Woodruff, on one side and Colonel Roosevelt on the other at Saratoga and the Democrats holding forth at Albany with Mayor Gaynor of Greater New York as the most likely candidate. The national irrigation congress, which meets at Pueblo, Colo., promises to be important. More than 15,000 G. A. R. veterans met at Atlantic City for their annual reunion. The people of Atlanta plan to purchase the home of the late Joel Chandler Harris and dedicate it as a memorial to the author. St. Patrick's cathedral in New York city will be consecrated during a week's celebration.

The "Nyal" line of remedies sold in Dodson's Drug Store are made from chemicals and drugs that are pure and of the highest standard and quality. When buying medicine you want the best. That is what you get in "Nyals."

The love interest in that ever popular play, "Billy, the Kid," is reported to be exceedingly well sustained throughout the entire action of the play. It is the real love of a young woman for a young man that the authors are said to have depicted, and not the mawkish sentiment so frequently found in plays of this sort where both the hero and heroine do impossible things for one another. In this instance the friendship of the boy and girl, ripens into the real love for the man and the woman, the latter showing her womanliness in the many sacrifices she makes for him. The players engaged for these two roles are especially commendable and with the balance of the company make up a cast that is most worthy. Manager Butler announces "Billy, the Kid" as the next attraction at the Opera House, on next Monday, Oct. 3.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. Unseemly noises disturbed her during the night. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff-button in a hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff-button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson arrived. Gertrude revealed she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. Gertrude was suspected. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff-button. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey left in response to a telegram. Gertrude said she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him a loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong wrecked his own bank and could clear Bailey. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, was found at the lodge. The lodgekeeper said Louise and Arnold had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated. Louise told Halsey, that while she still loved him she was to marry another, and that he would despise her when he learned the whole story.

Gertrude and Halsey went for a long walk that afternoon and Louise slept. Time hung heavy on my hands, and I did as I had fallen into a habit of doing lately—I sat down and thought things over. One result of my meditations was that I got up suddenly and went to the telephone. I had taken the most intense dislike to this Dr. Walker, whom I had never seen, and who was being talked of in the countryside as the fiance of Louise Armstrong.

I knew Sam Huston well. There had been a time, when Sam was a good deal younger than he is now, before he had married Anne Endicott, when I knew him even better. So now I felt no hesitation in calling him over the telephone. But when his office boy had given way to his confidential clerk, and that functionary had condescended to connect his employer's desk telephone, I was somewhat at a loss as to how to begin.

"Why, how are you, Rachel?" Sam said sonorously. "Going to build that house at Rock View?" It was a 20-year-old joke of his.

"Sometime, perhaps," I said. "Just now I want to ask you a question about something which is none of my business."

"I see you haven't changed an iota in a quarter of a century, Rachel." This was intended to be another jest. "Ask ahead; everything but my domestic affairs is at your service."

"Try to be serious," I said. "And tell me this: Has your firm made any plans for a house recently for a Dr. Walker at Casanova?"

"Yes, we have."

"Where was it to be built? I have a reason for asking."

"It was to be, I believe, on the Armstrong place. Mr. Armstrong himself consulted me, and the inference was—in fact, I am quite certain—the house was to be occupied by Mr. Armstrong's daughter, who was engaged to marry Dr. Walker."

When the architect had inquired for the different members of my family, and had finally rung off, I was certain of one thing. Louise Armstrong was in love with Halsey, and the man she was going to marry was Dr. Walker. Moreover, this decision was not new; marriage had been contemplated for some time. There must certainly be some explanation—but what was it?

That day I repeated to Louise the telegram Mr. Harton had opened. She seemed to understand, but an unhappier face I have never seen. She looked like a criminal whose reprieve is over, and the day of execution approaching.

CHAPTER XV.

Liddy Gives the Alarm.

The next day, Friday, Gertrude broke the news of her stepfather's death to Louise. She did it as gently as she could, telling her first that he was very ill, and finally that he was dead. Louise received the news in the most unexpected manner, and when Gertrude came out to tell me how she had stood it, I think she was almost shocked.

"She just lay and stared at me, Aunt Ray," she said. "Do you know, I believe she is glad, glad! And she is too honest to pretend anything else. What sort of a man was Mr. Paul Armstrong, anyhow?"

"He was a bully as well as a rascal, Gertrude," I said. "But I am convinced of one thing: Louise will send for Halsey now, and they will make it all up."

For Louise had steadily refused to see Halsey all that day, and the boy was frantic.

We had a quiet hour, Halsey and I, that evening, and I told him several things: about the request that we give up the lease to Sunnyside, about the telegram to Louise, about the rumors of an approaching marriage between the girl and Dr. Walker, and, last of all, my own interview with her the day before.

He sat back in a big chair, with his face in the shadow, and my heart fairly ached for him. He was so big and boyish! When I had finished he drew a long breath.

"Whatever Louise does," he said, "nothing will convince me, Aunt Ray, that she doesn't care for me. And up to two months ago, when she and her mother went west, I was the happiest fellow on earth. Then something made a difference; she wrote me that her people were opposed to the marriage; that her feeling for me was what it had always been, but that something had happened which had changed her ideas as to the future. I was not to write until she wrote me, and whatever occurred, I was to think the best I could of her. It sounded like a puzzle. When I saw her yesterday, it was the same thing, only, perhaps, worse."

"Halsey," I asked, "have you any idea of the nature of the interview between Louise Armstrong and Arnold the night he was murdered?"

"It was stormy. Thomas says once or twice he almost broke into the room, he was so alarmed for Louise."

"Another thing, Halsey," I said, "have you ever heard Louise mention a woman named Carrington, Nina Carrington?"

"Never," he said positively.

For try as we would, our thoughts always came back to that fatal Saturday night, and the murder. Every conversational path led to it, and we all felt that Jamieson was tightening the threads of evidence around John Bailey. The detective's absence was hardly reassuring; he must have had something to work on in town or he would have returned.

"We Had a Quiet Hour," Halsey and I.

The papers reported that the cashier of the Traders' bank was ill in his apartments at the Knickerbocker—a condition not surprising, considering everything. The guilt of the defunct president was no longer in doubt; the missing honds had been advertised and some of them discovered. In every instance they had been used as collateral for large loans, and the belief was current that not less than a million and a half dollars had been realized. Every one connected with the bank had been placed under arrest, and released on heavy bond.

Was he alone in his guilt, or was the cashier his accomplice? Where was the money? The estate of the dead man was comparatively small—a city house on a fashionable street, Sunnyside, a large estate largely mortgaged, an insurance of $50,000, and some personal property—this was all. The rest lost in speculation probably, the papers said. There was one thing which looked uncomfortable for Jack Bailey: He and Paul Armstrong together had promoted a railroad company in New Mexico, and it was rumored that together they had sunk large sums of money there. The business alliance between the two men added to the belief that Bailey knew something of the looting. His unexplained absence from the bank on Monday lent color to the suspicion against him. The strange thing seemed to be his surrendering himself on the point of departure. To me, it seemed the shrewd calculation of a clever rascal. I was not actively antagonistic to Gertrude's lover, but I meant to be convinced, one way or the other. I took no one on faith.

That night the Sunnyside ghost began to walk again. Liddy had been sleeping in Louise's dressing room on a couch, and the approach of dusk was a signal for her to barricade the entire suite. Situated as it was, beyond the circular staircase, nothing but an extremity of excitement would have made her pass it after dark. I confess myself that the place seemed to me to have a sinister appearance, but we kept that wing well lighted, and until the lights went out at midnight it was really cheerful, if one did not know its history.

On Friday night, then, I had gone to bed, resolved to go at once to sleep. Thoughts that insisted on obtruding themselves I pushed resolutely to the back of my mind, and I systematically relaxed every muscle. I fell asleep soon, and was dreaming that Dr. Walker was building his new house immediately in front of my windows; I could hear the thump-thump of the hammers, and then I waked to a knowledge that somebody was pounding on my door.

I was up at once, and with the sound of my footstep on the floor the low knocking ceased, to be followed immediately by sibilant whispering through the keyhole.

"Miss Rachel! Miss Rachel!" somebody was saying, over and over.

"Is that you, Liddy?" I asked, my hand on the knob.

"For the love of mercy, let me in!" she said in a low tone.

She was leaning against the door, for when I opened it, she fell in. She was greenish-white, and she had a red and black barred flannel petticoat over her shoulders.

"Listen," she said, standing in the middle of the floor and holding on to me. "Oh, Miss Rachel, it's the ghost of that dead man hammering to get in!"

Sure enough, there was a dull thud—thud—thud—it came apparently from the wall.

"It's not a ghost," I said decidedly. "If it was a ghost it wouldn't rap; it would come through the keyhole." Liddy looked at the keyhole. "But it sounds very much as though some one is trying to break into the house."

Liddy was shivering violently. I told her to get me my slippers and she brought me a pair of kid gloves, so I found my things myself and prepared to call Halsey. As before, the night alarm had found the electric lights gone; the hall, save for its night lamp, was in darkness, as I went across to Halsey's room. I hardly know what I feared, but it was a relief to find him there, very sound asleep, and with his door unlocked.

"Wake up, Halsey," I said, shaking him.

He stirred a little. Liddy was half in and half out of the door, afraid as usual to be left alone, and not quite daring to enter. Her scruples seemed to fade, however, all at once. She gave a suppressed yell, bolted into the room and stood tightly clutching the foot-board of the bed. Halsey was gradually waking.

"I've seen it," Liddy wailed. "A woman in white down the hall!"

I paid no attention.

"Halsey," I persevered, "some one is breaking into the house. Get up, won't you?"

"It isn't our house," he said sleepily. And then he roused to the exigency of the occasion. "All right, Aunt Ray," he said, still yawning. "If you'll let me get into something—"

It was all I could do to get Liddy out of the room. The demands of the occasion had no influence on her; she had seen the ghost, she persisted, and she wasn't going into the hall. But I got her over to my room at last, more dead than alive, and made her lie down on the bed.

The tappings, which seemed to have ceased for a while, had commenced again, but they were fainter. Halsey came over in a few minutes, and stood listening and trying to locate the sound.

"Give me my revolver, Aunt Ray," he said; and I got it—the one I had found in the tulip bed—and gave it to him. He saw Liddy there and divined at once that Louise was alone.

"You let me attend to this fellow, whoever it is, Aunt Ray, and go to Louise, will you? She may be awake and alarmed."

So in spite of her protests, I left Liddy alone and went back to the east wing. Perhaps I went a little faster past the yawning blackness of the circular staircase; and I could hear Halsey creaking cautiously down the main staircase. The rapping, or pounding, had ceased, and the silence was almost painful. And then suddenly, from apparently under my very feet, there rose a woman's scream, a cry of terror that broke off as suddenly as it came. I stood frozen and still. Every drop of blood in my body seemed to leave the surface and gather around my heart. In the dead silence that followed it throbbed as if it would burst. More dead than alive, I stumbled into Louise's bedroom. She was not there!

CHAPTER XVI.

In the Early Morning.

I stood looking at the empty bed. The coverings had been thrown back, and Louise's pink silk dressing-gown was gone from the foot, where it had lain. The night lamp burned dimly, revealing the emptiness of the place. I picked it up, but my hand shook so that I put it down again, and got somehow to the door.

There were voices in the hall and Gertrude came running toward me.

"What is it?" she cried. "What was that sound? Where is Louise?"

"She is not in her room," I said stupidly. "I think—it was she—who screamed."

Liddy had joined us now, carrying a light. We stood huddled together at the head of the circular staircase, looking down into its shadows. There was nothing to be seen, and it was absolutely quiet down there. Then we heard Halsey running up the main staircase. He came quickly down the hall to where we were standing.

"There's no one trying to get in. I thought I heard some one shriek. Who was it?"

Our stricken faces told him the truth.

"Some one screamed down there," I said. "And—and Louise is not in her room."

With a jerk Halsey took the light from Liddy and ran down the circular staircase. I followed him, more slowly. My nerves seemed to be in a state of paralysis; I could scarcely step. At the foot of the stairs Halsey gave an exclamation and put down the light.

"Aunt Ray," he called sharply.

At the foot of the staircase, huddled in a heap, her head on the lower stair, was Louise Armstrong. She lay limp and white, her dressing-gown dragging loose from one sleeve of her night-dress, and the heavy braid of her dark hair stretching its length a couple of steps above her head, as if she had slipped down.

She was not dead; Halsey put her down on the floor and began to rub her cold hands, while Gertrude and Liddy ran for stimulants. As for me, I sat there at the foot of that ghostly staircase—sat, because my knees wouldn't hold me—and wondered where it would all end. Louise was still unconscious, but she was breathing better, and I suggested that we get her back to bed before she came to. There was something grisly and horrible to me, seeing her there in almost the same attitude and in the same place where we had found her brother's body. And to add to the similarity, just then the hall clock, far off, struck faintly three o'clock.

It was four before Louise was able to talk, and the first rays of dawn were coming through her windows, which faced the east, before she could tell us coherently what had occurred. I give it as she told it. She lay propped in bed, and Halsey sat beside her, unrebuffed, and held her hand while she talked.

She Lay Limp and White.

INJURED IN WRECK.

Conductor Thrown Down 25 Foot Embankment.

George Hahn, C. & N. W. conductor, Arbor Ave., West Chicago, Ill., says: "I was thrown from a car down a 25-foot embankment and my kidneys were badly bruised. Kidney trouble developed and for a whole year, I was unable to work. I suffered agonizing pains in my back and the kidney secretions were in terrible condition. My vitality gradually diminished and the doctor's treatment failed to help. When in despair I began with Doan's Kidney Pills and soon improved. Continued use cured me and at present my health is excellent."

Unfair.

Senator John H. Bankhead, discussing a political move, said with a smile:

"Oh, it's too coldly calculated. It's almost unfair. In fact, it's like Mrs. Blank.

"Mrs. Blank is a leader of Bar Harbor society. Her husband said to her, one afternoon, as she made a very elaborate toilet for a garden party that she was giving to some members of the British legation:

"'Why did you write to all our guests that this party was to be absolutely informal?'

"Mrs. Blank laughed.

"'So as to be the best-dressed woman present, of course,' she said."

A Happy Husband.

"Our house used to smell soapy and steamy wash day," says a well-known man, "but since my wife began buying Easy Task laundry soap, there is no more of that. I've investigated that soap and find it is made of purest cocoanut oil, cleanest tallow, borax and naphtha, and that it not only cleans, but antisepticises clothes, cooking vessels and everything else washed with it. We tried it first by buying two cakes for ten cents, with the understanding that our money would be refunded if it didn't make good. Of course, it made good."

Not Impregnable.

Horace Avory, K. C., just appointed a judge, is one of the mordant wits of the British bar. One day, cross-examining a recalcitrant witness, he asked:

"What are you?"

"A retired gentleman," proudly asserted the ex-cheesemonger.

"Well," snarled Avery, "when you achieved the position of gentleman, why did you retire from it?"

PRESSED HARD.
Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in a Southern state says: "My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum. I was so pleased with it that, after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal; the whole family liked it so well that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but in a more marked degree in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

TINY BABY'S PITIFUL CASE

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible eczema from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few mattered pimples. They would break the skin and peel off leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalds. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed.

"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with eczema. Mrs. Joseph Kossmann, 7 St. John's Place, Ridgewood Heights, N. Y., Apr. 30 and May 4, '09."

Outlining Treatment.

"I want you to take care of my practise while I am away."

"But, doctor, I have just graduated. Have had little experience."

Home Millinery

THE untrimmed hats, turned out by manufacturers ready for the professional or amateur millinery, are so good in themselves, so graceful and becoming that they might be worn without the addition of ornament of any sort, and still be pleasing, although not complete. They are made of many varieties of silk, of velvet or plush, and in all sorts of combinations.

Those shown in the illustration are among the handsomest, made of silk crape in many rich colorings with high luster, and having the brims faced with velvet. Their shapes are all prepared for the addition of trimming, which this season will surely be of feathers. For some reason feathers have come to the fore like an avalanche. There are bands and pompons, quills, wreathes, breasts, sprays, wings and plumes. Perhaps the airships have called our attention to the feathered throng that sail about the sky, or perhaps chanticler has really awakened the world—to the possibilities of feathers. At any rate they are everywhere in endless and bewildering variety.

They have been made up in pieces all ready for the hat, and the way of the amateur milliner is made easy. This is the sort of trimming that is safe for her to undertake. She should buy both the shape and the trimming all ready prepared. Some of the former come already lined, which is a great convenience; for placing the trimming properly is not easy by any means.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

GET PLENTY OF FRESH AIR

Importance of Ventilating Rooms, Especially Sleeping Chambers, Is Too Often Overlooked.

Nothing is more common than fresh air. Nature has provided it in abundance for all who will take it. There is no one thing so potent to prevent disease, so effective in maintaining a healthy action of the whole body. Bad air spreads disease. Consumption, pneumonia, bronchitis and catarrh are bad-air diseases. Bad air, too, is a cause of colds.

Sewage flowing into pure water pollutes it. So the air we exhale from our lungs pollutes the air in the room. The impure air from the lungs of any number of people in a room mixes with the pure air and makes it dangerous and unfit for breathing. There must be a supply of fresh air constantly coming in to take the place of the foul air, which in all cases should be permitted to escape near the top of the room.

It is a law of nature that air is always in motion, and because this is true one has only to lower the windows a little from the top and to raise them a little from the bottom and the process of ventilation will go on without our thought or care.

It is impossible to estimate the amount of misery and suffering caused by impure air. If you would escape, see to it that you get at all time a plentiful supply of fresh air.

BRAIDED COSTUME.

Braiding seems to have lost none of its popularity, and some stunning costumes are elaborately trimmed in this manner. The cut today suggests a dressy afternoon costume in pale gray satin messaline, the bodice and tunic covered with self-tone silk rat-tail braid in close design. The front and neck of bodice is cream lace and tucked mousseline, the former edged with a narrow band of black velvet ribbon and tiny black buttons. The tunic opening on left side is trimmed at bottom with a huge fringed cabochon of gray braid. The long trained skirt is finished at bottom with three deep tucks.

WEAK-ANKLED WOMAN'S SHOE

Dressy and High Footwear Now Being Made In a Variety of Styles.

It is an actual hardship to the woman whose ankles are so weak that she cannot wear low shoes or pumps in hot weather. Besides the discomfort from heat in our climate one is conscious of looking heavily shod.

Many are tempted for dress occasions to slip into dainty pumps, but for those women who have a wholesome dread of broken bones what is to be done?

Fortunately it is now possible to get "dressy" shoes high. To wear with lingerie frocks there are good looking shoes in white buckskin or suede, some of them embroidered or beaded on the vamp.

High bronze shoes or colored boots to match special frocks can also be had.

For morning or outing use there are well cut high tan shoes or sporting looking white canvas and buckskin with heavy soles. Tennis soles are also to be found on boots that support the ankle.

Reefer Coat Smart Wrap.

There is no smarter wrap for younger women's wear at seaside, lake or mountain than the reefer coat made from a light-weight woollen checked material. Now that the one-piece dresses are so much worn the short, loosely fitting little reefers are just the thing for warmth. A blonde wearing a reefer in a pale-blue and white check, trimmed with white pique collar and cuffs and gilt buttons over her frock of white pique looked charming, and I have in mind a handsome brunette in a pretty gray linen frock with a reefer of white and gray checked goods, the trimmings white suede and gilt buttons.

Smart-Looking Bonnet.

Elderly women who prefer bonnets to hats sometimes find it difficult to find pleasing models. At a store I saw recently some very pretty and smart-looking bonnets. One was of braided net, black, draped softly over the crown, and coronet trimmed with a bunch of dainty white flowers from which rose a black aigrette. The strings were of good ribbon. Another was of white Yedda braid, covered with cobwebby black net. The left side was trimmed with black silk roses and lilies of the valley. Black roses also held the strings at the back.

Gray Linen.

As the season advances the fashionable woman emerges from exceedingly light colors to just a touch of severity in her garb. A new gown is of gray linen, cut in one piece with an oddly shaped band of linen on the skirt, opening in front to show an inset of heavy lace. Around the band is a narrow hem of linen on the outside. Bands of linen are used for trimmings and little caps go over the sleeves. A collarette of finely-tucked India linen can be worn with the costume or dispensed with at pleasure.

Seasonable Ideas on Serving.

Dainty desserts that appeal to the appetite need not be hard to prepare. One especially nice and very little work is called Nut Snow Dessert.

Place marshmallows in the oven until lightly toasted, add chopped nuts and serve with sweetened and flavored whipped cream.

Orange-Banana Cream.

Half fill deep sherbet cups with orange jelly, made strong in both color and flavor by soaking the peel of two oranges in the water before adding to the gelatine. Mash two bananas, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a fourth of a cup of sugar. When light and smooth fold in one cupful of whipped cream. Heap this on the jelly and serve.

Casserole of Lamb's Liver.

Lay the liver in slightly salted water an hour to draw out the blood and make it firm. Rinse and wipe dry. Fry slices of salt pork in a pan until crisp; remove the pork and add an onion sliced; when brown remove the onion and add the liver, turn and cook on both sides, then put it into a casserole with two cupfuls of stock and a dozen potato balls and as many small onions. Cover closely and cook until the vegetables are tender, in a moderate oven. Send to the table in the dish in which it was baked and you have a dinner all ready to serve.

A Nice Supper or Luncheon Dish.

Cook a dozen tomatoes until soft, put through a sieve and stand aside. In a frying pan put three tablespoonfuls of butter and half a dozen eggs; stir and cook until smooth, add the strained tomato and three tablespoonfuls of Parmesan cheese and serve with brown bread.

Omelet with ham is a good breakfast dish. Prepare the omelet as usual and spread with seasoned and chopped ham, place in the oven to finish cooking.

Beet Relish.

Take one quart of cooked beets, chopped, one quart of cabbage, one-half cup of grated horseradish, two cupfuls of sugar and vinegar to moisten. Put in cans and seal for winter use.

CONVERSATION is but carving;

And but little at a time;

Let them neither starve nor stuff,
And that each may have his due

In the Canning Season.

Look up the choice recipes that you were anxious to try, make a list of them, then in the stress of the summer work, important things will not be forgotten. This is the month for "putting up" peaches. One famous cook who was an artist in canning peaches always prepared them the night before and let them stand covered with sugar until morning. They had a richness no other method gave. Can as usual. Here is a recipe which many may like to try while the cucumbers are in their prime:

Cucumber Catsup.

Choose fresh green cucumbers of the size and quality used for slicing. Reject those that are at all bitter, peel and grate them. Put into a bag and drain them, or a sieve may be used. To every quart of pulp add half a cupful of grated horseradish and half a cupful of grated onions, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of white pepper and two tablespoonfuls of salt. Add a quart of cold cider vinegar and seal in air tight jars.

Plum Catsup.

Boil the plums with as little water as possible until soft; rub through a colander and to every five pounds of pulp, add two and a half pounds of sugar, a cupful of cider vinegar and a level tablespoonful each of cinnamon and cloves. Cook half an hour, stirring steadily, and seal boiling hot. This is especially fine with beef, veal or ham.

To Pickle Plums.

Gather green plums before they begin to turn; make a pickle of mustard seed and salt with vinegar enough to cover the fruit. Boil and pour over the plums three mornings in succession. They may be used in place of olives.

Grape catsup is prepared the same as plum catsup and is a choice relish to serve with ham, venison or any game.

Minced Salt Mackerel.

This is a nice way of using pieces of mackerel left from a previous meal: Free the fish from skin and bones and mince fine. Make a cream sauce of two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter. When bubbling add a cupful of thin cream, cook until smooth and thick, season with a little onion juice and salt if needed. Place the fish in the sauce until heated. Serve in mashed potato nests sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Nellie Maxwell.

Vermont Thrift.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, editor of the Boston Transcript, is a great admirer of the thrift of the Vermonters, but thinks sometimes they carry it too far.

O'Brien was up in Vermont last summer and went to dinner with a friend who had some political aspirations. As they came in the door he heard the lady of the house say to the hired girl: "I see Mr. Jones has somebody with him for dinner. Take these two big potatoes down to the cellar and bring up taree small ones."

Don't Throw That Rug Away.

Just because a rug looks old and worn and the dust has been ground into it so deeply that a day's beating will not take it out, do not throw it away. Make a thick white suds with Easy Task soap, scrub the rug flat on the floor, wipe it dry with a clean cloth, and it will surprise you how beautifully new it is. Easy Task soap is an enemy to dirt and a friend to fabric of all kinds. It is the clean, white laundry soap that halves your washing and doubles your satisfaction.

"I owe her a call and she is determined to collect it."

WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.
"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there for a week and is well pleased with the country, so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Lamdin, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place.

My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Zimmer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."
Yours truly,

There is a larger acreage of wheat being sown along this stream this fall than for years. The farmers have made up their minds that they have got to raise their own breadstuffs, if the price of flour is going to stay so high.

We think this storm must be the Equinoxial and it will be a great help to the newly sown wheat and fall pasturage.

R. M. Williams and Wm. Logue have been drawn as jurymen for the October term, of court, from this section of the county. It will be Will's first experience in this line of business.

Wonder why the PRESS does not print a list of the jurymen? Other county sapers do. [The list only came into our hands this week. The trial and jury lists appear in this issue.]—Ed.

The many friends of Mrs. M. J. Logue will be pleased to learn that her health is improving, it it is but slowly. She was able to take a carriage ride last wek.

Crows are destroying lots of corn in this section. They have not been so plenty in a long time as they are this fall.

Fortunate Accident.

Monday evening, Mrs. Wm. Clark, of east ward, accompanied fourteen small children on a straw ride to Sizerville. When the party were crossing the railroad at the Sizer farm, they met with an accident, that certainly proved lucky. Mrs. Clark relates the facts, as follows: "Last evening, Sept. 23d, I joined a party of fourteen small children in a straw ride to Sizerville and when we arrived at the crossing this side of Chas. J. Howard's farm, where they had changed the road and had no lights up, it being dark, we drove over the bank, upsetting the wagon, the horses running away. Myself, with a babe in my arms, and four little ones were pinned under the wagon and could not move until help arrived. Luckily none of the little ones were injured, more than a few cuts and bruises. I am injured in the side and back; under the Dr's care. Just a few nights ago I dreamed about just what has happened and told same to several, but never thought my dreams would come true."
